

Impact on Chronic Disease Prevention

- Disease Management: FIM, particularly in diabetes, can lead to better glycemic control, reduced medication reliance, and improved cardiovascular health.
- Economic Impact: Implementing these programs could potentially save the U.S. healthcare system $27–$48 billion annually by reducing hospital readmissions and complications.
- Systemic Shift: The approach is supported by the 2022 White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition, and Health, aiming to make healthy, nutritious food accessible as a standard part of healthcare.
- Key Health Markers: Studies indicate that whole-food, plant-based diets, often promoted in these programs, can improve LDL cholesterol, triglycerides, and blood pressure in as little as 0.5–2 years.

Common Food-Based Interventions

- Whole Plant-Based Foods: Emphasizing whole grains, vegetables, and fruits to lower disease risk.
- Nutrient-Dense Foods: Utilizing berries (antioxidants), fermented foods, and spices like turmeric to reduce inflammation.

NUTRITION EDUCATION

“Food as Medicine” integrates nutritional interventions—such as produce prescriptions, medically tailored meals, and counseling—directly into clinical care to prevent, manage, and treat chronic diseases like diabetes and heart disease. By addressing food insecurity and improving nutrition, this evidence-based approach reduces healthcare costs, improves patient outcomes, and advances health equity.

Key Aspects of Food as Medicine (FIM) Initiatives

- Medically Tailored Meals (MTM): Pre-prepared meals designed by nutritionists for specific diseases (e.g., low-sodium for hypertension), which can improve dietary adherence by over 90%.
- Produce Prescriptions: Health providers prescribe free or subsidized fresh fruits and vegetables to patients with chronic conditions or food insecurity.
- Medically Tailored Groceries: Providing customized boxes of food to help patients manage health conditions at home.
